Last week two women in our town got a medal for saving a little boy from drowning. The little boy was playing near a pond with his dog when the dog jumped into the water and began to swim after a duck.

The little boy wanted to follow his dog, so he waded into the pond after him, wearing rubber boots. The boots filled up with water. The little boy sat down in the pond to pull them off, and the water went over his head.

Luckily, the two women were near, and they ran to pull him out and take him home.
